A SHORT GUIDE TO GNIEZNO

Gniezno is located in central-western Poland, in the Greater Poland voivodship, 48 km northeast of Poznan. It is at the centre of the Gniezno Lakeland, with a population of over 70,000 and a total urban and suburban area of 40,89 km<sup>2</sup>. Although Gniezno is a small city, it makes up for its size in history and local attractions.

Rated as one of the oldest towns in Poland, Gniezno maintains a unique place on the country's map. Nearly all historic buildings within its walls can trace their origins to the earliest period of the Polish state. Gniezno is also recognised as a significant place of worship of Saint Adalbert, the first bishop of Prague.

The single most unmissable thing to see in Gniezno is the 14th-century Gothic Cathedral, with its priceless Gniezno Doors, memorabilia, relics, and the tomb of Saint Adalbert that draws Catholics from all over Europe. The Cathedral witnessed the coronation of the first five Polish kings, and one can also visit the archive containing several of Poland's earliest manuscripts. There are also several Gothic churches to see in this history-laden town, and the Archdiocesan Museum and the Museum of the Origins of the Polish State are well worth a visit.

When you grow weary of museums, galleries and exhibitions, consider a stroll around the tranquil Lake Jelonek, one of the best places to view the splendour of the old town of Gniezno or simply follow Gniezno Royal Trail and chase the Rabbit 🐰
